This educational day will provide participants an opportunity to hear current topics in infection prevention and to network with other infection preventionists. This activity will lead to an improved consistency and competence in infection prevention and control practice. This continuing nursing education activity was approved by the Alabama State Nurses Association, an accredited approver of continuing nursing education by the American Nurses Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation.

2026 Avera Infection Prevention Day of Sharing

07/14/2026 from 09:00 AM to 04:15 PM

Live Activity

Purpose:

Infection Preventionists are invited to participate in a dynamic one-day conference focused on advancing knowledge, strengthening collaboration, and enhancing practice in infection prevention and control. This educational experience will explore key topics including antimicrobial stewardship, tuberculosis management, safe handling of soiled instruments, and the critical role of environmental services. Participants will also engage in sessions designed to cultivate a discerning professional mindset and strengthen relationships across healthcare departments to support safer, more effective care delivery.

Objectives:

- 1 Evaluate opportunities to connect with staff while in leadership positions (Healy)
- 2 Review definitions and theories of leadership related to healthcare settings (Healy)
- 3 Identify ways to improve communication, trust, and reliability (Healy)
- 4 Brainstorm three ideas on connecting with staff and providers when implementing process improvement projects (Healy)
- 5 Evaluate strategies for prevention and timely diagnosis of tuberculosis in healthcare settings. (Nazir)
- 6 Discuss current treatment approaches and challenges in tuberculosis management. (Nazir)
- 7 Review Public health impact and risk factors influencing spread in communities and healthcare settings (Nazir)
- 8 Define different types of discernment (Minnich Kjesbo)
- 9 Identify key components of self-awareness in cultivating a discerning heart (e.g., intuition, memory, body awareness, imagination, reason, emotions) (Minnich Kjesbo)
- 10 Understand importance of listening and reflection to discernment (Minnich Kjesbo)
- 11 Explore “the learning/discerning space” as an integral part of creating a culture of discernment (Minnich Kjesbo)
- 12 Describe the One Health concept and its relevance to infection prevention and control (IPC) across human, animal, and environmental health sectors. (Clark/Kollimann)
- 13 Explain Minnesota’s collaborative model through MOHASC, including how cross-sector partnerships advance antimicrobial stewardship and reduce antimicrobial resistance (AMR). (Clark/Kollimann)
- 14 Identify the role of the APIC Veterinary IPC Council in strengthening veterinary infection prevention practices and supporting interprofessional collaboration. (Clark/Kollimann)
- 15 Apply One Health principles to IPC practice, identifying opportunities for IPC professionals to engage in stewardship efforts and cross-sector collaboration. (Clark/Kollimann)
- 16 Reframe Environmental Services as a critical infection prevention function, not everyday housekeeping, by understanding the science behind PPE, standard precautions, chemical selection, and dwell time. (Peterson, Price, Jurgens, Balmaceda)
- 17 Apply risk based, tiered environmental cleaning strategies that match the right chemical to the right pathogen and support sustainable growth and staffing models. (Peterson, Price, Jurgens, Balmaceda)
- 18 Strengthen collaboration across Infection Prevention, Facilities, and Safety teams through shared accountability, quality rounds, and clear ownership—improving communication, response times, and safety outcomes. (Peterson, Price, Jurgens, Balmaceda)
